In today's Update

-- American Association for Human Design Professionals (HDP)
-- New Titles of the 384 Lines Series

-- American Association for Human Design Professionals (HDP)

On winter solstice, we proposed to the licensed HD analysts a shift from the licensing formality as previously implemented by New Sun Services America toward an association that allows for many other kinds of disciplines to be integrated. The applications for Human Design analysis are far more numerous than simply having the narrow track of giving readings (while giving GOOD readings is still a very worthwhile objective, of course).

The response from analysts to the proposal has been very positive and we feel encouraged to proceed.

The American Association for Human Design Professionals (HDP) is an independent, member-operated organization. Its goal is to promote and support objective, careful and independent research, application and transfer of Human Design and to build a strong trade association that encourages the development of recognizable standards and mutual exchange of information among those who integrate Human Design into their professional lives.

If you are a student of the Human Design System, you are invited to become a member of the association on one of three levels:

1. Student Member: Open to all students of Design.

Annual membership fee is $25.

Privileges: 5% discount on most NSSA products, updates and access to discussion forums.

2. Research Member: You've had an extensive study in Human Design and use it in your own area of expertise. You have an interest in sharing your experiments, insights and experience, but not necessarily to give Human Design readings or to teach Human Design per se.

Annual membership fee is $50.

Privileges: 10% discount on most NSSA products, a web page and/or links on humandesignsystem.com, updates and access to discussion forums, voting on HDP matters.

3. Professional Member: People who offer Human Design analysis readings, workshops or classes, who have completed the professional education and demonstrated competency. Annual membership fee is $50.

Privileges: 10% discount on most NSSA products, a web page and/or links on humandesigntsystem.com, updates and access to discussion forums, help and tools for professional work, voting on HDP matters.

Please support the goals of the association and become a member today.
