-- 10 Years Human Design in America

This coming August, it will be ten years since our friend Peter Wolf brought us our Human Design charts on a vacation trip from Switzerland. We were struck by what we saw on those charts and what followed is history. Three months later, in November and December 1993, Ra was our guest and taught the first, rudimentary Basic and Advanced trainings in America to a group of eight curious people, including the two of us.

As New Sun Services America, we then set out to spread the news. We traveled to introduce people to Human Design and clarified, catalogued, organized and displayed the basic concepts, which evolved over the years into what is now The Course in Human Design. We organized tours and annual clusters of classes in Taos with Ra, sent out newsletters, created and published books, tools, a huge audio library of classes and organized the original licensing of aspiring analysts.

>From 1999 to 2001, after Human Design was firmly established in America, Ra made a series of successive moves to distance himself from us, which turned out to be a great opportunity to examine our knowledge of Human Design in depth without being conditioned by him and his view of the world.

One result was the creation of an independent not-for-profit (HDP) that was the direct shift out of the old, unworkable analyst licensing program. If you haven't yet checked this out, visit www.humandesignsystem.net.

The main shift, though, has been to liberate our spirits, returning to a compassionate view of the world. We've learned so much, by starting with ourselves and our own truth of a humanistic Design that recognizes everyone as already living their design.

-- Greetings from Zeno

Recently, I've had the opportunity to speak with clients of people who offer Human Design using the technique of names, phrases, labels, keynotes and slogans. Each time I hear someone tell me what they have learned, I cringe upon hearing some really questionable things being said. A few days back, someone with an emotional definition of Emoting, from the Root to the Solar Plexus, which I also have, said, I learned that my moods are either up or down and nothing in between.

What is this supposed to help clarify? I asked the person whether that was in fact how she perceived herself. We had a short conversation, and I was once again struck with the fact that the evolution I've experienced in chart consulting is both extremely satisfying and much healthier than the ways I originally learned and taught Design, and that I'm very inspired to share what it is I've come to realize.

The shift in my orientation has been both profound and highly effective for clients. This October, I am offering a revised Practical Applications workshop (see below). When you would like to consult using Human Design with a humanistic approach, this workshop is for you.

You should have a working knowledge of the basic mechanics to attend. When you have not yet taken a basic course and would like a primer, I will give a three-day Elements of Human Design class in August (see below).

Practical Applications is a qualifying course to be a Professional Human Design Practitioner through HDP, the American Association of Human Design Practitioners. Visit www.humandesignsystem.net.

If you've already taken the equivalent class from me (i.e. the old analyst training or Practical Applications), you may attend for half price.

Being introduced to your chart can be an incredible experience. But then what? How do you work with it?

Over her 10 years of studying Human Design, being a practitioner and trainer has led Zeno to experiment with effective ways you can enter into your own direct understanding of your chart.

Following an initial consultation, she offers an affordable program geared to your chart and life experience. This includes four one-hour sessions, using three different charts of significant people in your life (with their permission to use their charts for your study) and an ephemeris. Over the course of one month, you will gain very direct, experiential knowledge of how your Design is playing out in your life.
